For a cultural traveler, cities like Cape Town and Johannesburg have many museums, galleries, and fascinating historical sites. For discerning foodie, it's hard to rival restaurants and wineries from the Western Cape, but adrenaline junkies are spoiled for choice with shark diving, white water rafting, and the world's highest bridge bungee. Of course, South Africa is also a country where natural beauty, and exploring its diverse flora and fauna is at the top of the list for many visitors, whether they stay for several months or just a few days. 01 out of 20 Most people who take an African safari are probably one of the main reasons to visit South Africa in the first place. The country's most famous game reserve is Kruger National Park, and for good reason it is also the largest and oldest park, and it is easily accessible. You can see all the Big Five here, and there's a wide range of accommodation from self-catering cottages to luxury chalets. Night trips, horse safaris, and walking safaris are available for all. Kruger's popularity means that it is also often crowded. The more off-the-beaten-track safari destination is considered the Galagadi Cross Park, a true desert located on the Botswana border and known for its population of black-maned lions. If you like the idea of a self-drive safari, check out the Mkhuze Game Reserve (located north of Durban Zululand) or Addo Elephant National Park (located near Port Elizabeth in the eastern Cape). There are also several smaller safari parks near Cape Town. 02 of the 20 Hein von Horsten/Getty Images South Africa is home to some of the most beautiful golf courses in the world, and they're surprisingly affordable. Gary Player and Ernie Els earned their first birdies on South African golf courses, and some of the country's top spots were developed by these two golfing legends. Stand-out favorites include The Links at the luxury hotel Fancourt (located in George, Western Cape) and Leopard Creek, located near Kruger National Park. The former is the top-rated golfer in South Africa and 34th best course in the world. The player decorated by Gary Player offers stunning views of the Outeniqua Mountains. The latter is special in its truly African flavor. Where else can you see giraffes wandering through the green, or spot crocodiles and hippos wallowing in the water hazard? Many of South Africa's golf courses are associated with luxury spa hotels, so no golfers have much to do too. 03 of 20 Address Muizenberg Beach, Beach Rd, Muizenberg, Cape Town, 7950, South Africa Phone +27 21 480 7700 South African coastline stretches over 1,600 miles, from the icy Atlantic to the gentle Indian Ocean. Both coasts have their fair share of surf spots, but the most famous is all in the Cape Town area or further north along the east coast. If you're headed to Mother City, check out Muizenberg beginner waves, or Big Bay near Blouberg Beach. The pros, the most famous wave here are dungeons, a beastly right-hander known to get as big as 60 feet. South Africa's surfing capital, however, is Jeffreys Bay, located 50 miles south of Port Elizabeth. This set-back city welcomes the likes of Kelly Slater and Jordy Smith for the annual J-Bay Open, which focuses on the legendary right-handed break superpiece. Further north, Durban is another hotspot for beginners and pros alike. For the most part, check out the waves at North Beach, Bay of Plenty, and New Pier. 04 of 20 Address 1 Roland Norris Dr, Umkomaas, Durban, 1709, South Africa Phone +27 82 800 4668 If you would rather be underwater than on top of it, consider subscribing to encounter the world's largest apex predator: a great white shark. These gorgeous animals are hoisted into the cape waters with an abundance of their favorite booty-cage for seals. Several companies in Gansbaai, Mossel Bay, and Simonstown offer cage diving tours that allow you to see sharks in their natural environment without compromising your safety. If you'd rather do away with steel rods, head further north to Alwal Shoal, a Marine Protected Area located south of Durban. Here you can dive with several shark species without cage. In summer (November to April), bait diving allows you to get up close and personal with tiger sharks, while bull sharks and ocean blacktip sharks are common all year round. In winter (June to September), sand tiger sharks gather on the reef to mate. There are plenty of long-distance hiking trails to explore, some of which will take you along a breathtaking coast, while others introduce you to the hidden secrets of the country interior. Among the most famous routes are fanie botha trail mpumalanga, and the African rim, which crosses the Western Cape mountains. If you're looking for a less structured hiking experience, head over to the Wild Coast or The Drakensberg Mountains. In both places, an abundance of short and long trails allows you to explore as much or as little as you want. The Wild Coast (also known as Transkei) offers a glimpse into the rugged beauty of the East Cape coast and the culture of the Xhosa people. Drakensberg is home to the highest mountain range in South Africa. 06 of 20 Peter Van Der Byl/Getty Images For an avid botanist, South Africa is a truly special destination. In the south of the country, the Cape Floral Region is home to about 9,500 plant species, 70 percent of which are found nowhere else on Earth. The region is one of the six flower kingdoms of the world and is especially famous for its completely unique species of fynbos. For a short time each year, the flowers from the Western Cape are soaked with wildflower blooms in the Northern Cape. At the end of July or early August, the arrival of spring sees the dry landscapes of north-western South Africa transformed into a sea of colour. The flower begins in the far north and slowly spreads south, and lasts only a few great weeks. Hot viewing wildflowers include Namaqua National Park and Goegap Nature Reserve. 07 of the 20 History lovers will find many interests in South Africa. At the Blood River, two monuments stand as between the Zulu people and the Dutch voortrekkers. The Anglo-Zulu War has commemorated the memorial and museums of historic battlefields such as Rorke's Drift and Isandlwana. Of course, South Africa's modern history was overshadowed by the horror of apartheid, and many of its sights are associated with this period of racial injustice. In Johannesburg, it is possible to see the firsthand revival that has taken place since apartheid with the tour of Soweto. Once the site of a bloody uprising, the township is now a cultural hotspot. 08 of the 20 Mark Harris/Getty Images South Africa has no less than eight UNESCO World Heritage sites, each of which is recognized by the United Nations as of great cultural or natural importance. Other cultural sites include the Hurn of Humanity cradle (where fossils of our ancient ancestors were discovered) and the ruins of the ancient kingdom of Mapungubwe. Other places range from Vrededorf Dome to Siemangalo Wetland Park. The former is one of the largest meteor craters on the planet, set up for collisions so large that it is believed to have shaped evolutionary history. The latter is an incredibly protected area that stretches from the Mozambique border to the east coast of the province of KwaZulu-Natal. Here you can explore the beaches, game reserves and valuable estuary areas. Continue to 9 of the 20 below. 09 of 20 If you have limited time, Cape Town's Kirstenbosch Gardens offer an impressive overview of South African plant life. Described as one of the world's largest botanical gardens, this South African showpiece is set on the eastern edge of Table Mountain. Gardens house more than 7,000 of the 22,000 plant species that grow in South Africa, including unique plants such as fynbos, pelargoniums, and herbal flora. 10 of the 20 few places showcase South Africa's stormy past as eloquently as Constitution Hill. This living museum, once a prison, follows the country's long road to democracy. Nelson Mandela, Mahatma Gandhi, Fatima Meer, and tens of thousands of ordinary South Africans were all just here at some point during the country's volatile history, making it a must-visit. 11 out of 20 Yann Lamoureux/EyeEm/Getty Images If you're staying in Cape Town, it's worth a tour of The Cape of Good Hope, the cape off the country's southern tip. While the true southern tip of Africa is a few hundred miles south at Cape Agulhas, the Cape's good hopes are still worth a visit to its rugged natural beauty. Here you can whale watch from June to November, climb the lighthouse for stunning views, or simply explore the landscape. Don't forget to stop at Boulder's Beach if you want to see penguins! 12 of the 20 Catherine Scotton/Getty Images Apartheid Museum opened in Johannesburg in 2001. Visitors here can learn about South Africa's painful history of racial segregation, including how residents were once classified by their nasal width, hair type, skin pigmentation, and other physical characteristics. The museum includes interactive displays, film footage and historical photographs. Continue 13 of 20 below. 13 of the 20 Bloude River Canyon Reserve is the third largest canyon in the world and one of South Africa's most visited attractions. The reserve includes hiking trails, a resort, and spectacular views of natural wonders such as Bourke's Luck Potholes, Three Rondavels, Pinnacle Rock, and God's Window. 14 out of 20 Fermier is a popular restaurant in Pretoria that country table restaurant on the map in South Africa. Don't expect a chic, ultra-trendy restaurant though. Instead, you will be eating dishes such as lamb loin with confit lemon and asparagus mud wall and tin roof shed. This apartment is one of the best known sights in Cape Town. If you want to go up to get an impressive view, you can either hike or take the cable way. It is part of Table Mountain National Park, which is home to incredible wildlife, especially bird species such as booted eagles, and African harrier-hawks. 16 out of 20 Henk Bogaard/Getty Images Pilanesburg is an underrated national park that is home to the Big 5 and so much more. The park is just three hours from Johannesburg and offers a one-day safari that includes guides and lunch. The best time to visit is from July to October, when it is dry and clear. Continue 17 of 20 below. 17 of the 20 TripSavvy/Jess Macdonald Big Hole, also known as the Kimberley Mine, is an open pit that is claimed to be the deepest hole under what is called the hands. Mining activities ended here way back in 1914, but it's still worth visiting a great exhibition center, diamond vault, and underground experience. 18 of 20 TripSavvy/Faye Strassle in Cape Town, you can take a tour of Robben Island, a one-time political prison where Nelson Mandela was imprisoned for 18 years. You can also tour District Six, where forced eviction from non-whites took place after passing the Racist Group Areas Act of 1950. There is also a spa on site. 20 of the 20 Zeitz Museum of Contemporary Art Africa opened in 2017 as the largest museum of contemporary African art in the world. Located in Cape Town's V&A Waterfront district, this hotel is housed in a converted grain tank. It has more than 100 galleries. Gallery.
