Miniature golf course game

This is my first instructive and I'll show you how to make a small mini golf course. You can take more courses and connect them. Put four jumbo popsicle sticks together and cut another two to fit the length of the four sticks. Then paste the two severed sticks into the four poles. Now get two popsicle jumbo sticks and stick them on the long sides of your base made in step 1. Then cut a popsicle stick to fit the back of your base. Stick it on the back. Now cut a piece of fine, soft material to fit inside your base. I'm using a thin sheet of eva foam, but you can also use cardboard. Then cut a hole where you want the ball to come in. Now you need to cut a piece of felt to fit your eva foam/cardboard sheet. Paste them together and then paste them into your base. Now you can make the obstacles. BE CREATIVE! I cut two jumbo popsicle sticks and stuck them together. I did it twice and hooked them to the base in a diagonal position. As for the golf club, I have a toothpick and put the thin eva foam at the bottom. The blaze was cut into two forms of golf club. Thanks for watching, We Can Men, if you're ever going to go back to golf, this is the weekend. The US Open is held at Chambers Bay Golf Course, a fairly new public track outside Tacoma, Washington. For much of the country, this means that the best action – when the leaders are playing – will take place in prime time on Saturday and Sunday. Fox Sports will lead the championship for the first time, replacing NBC Sports, which has covered it for 20 years. The town on the left coast means that golfers from the East and Midwest can do so during the day, and then return with a cold one just as leaders are ripping off in Washington. If you are a regular golfer or an occasional hacker thinking you would like to get out of there again, listen to the advice we have gathered from some of the best names in golf. The key: Keep it simple. That's why there aren't a lot of tips here – just some crucial ones that will make your round go smoother. Pure hitting: A higher education professional shows you how to keep things simple. Clear your mind and swing easy with driving tips from Mike Bender, the director of Mike Bender Golf Academy at Magnolia Plantation Golf Club in Lake Mary, Florida. The address feet are wider than the shoulders, the left arm aligns with the shaft, the ball lines up with the left armpit. Takeaway Keep the club head down as you first bring it back. Don't pick up the club quickly. Turn to the top, you should feel a slight tilt to the right as you charge before the descent. The transition arms accelerate and the weight begins to transfer. Being your feet pushing you to the ground. Impact Now tear it down - don't flip your hands. They stay ahead of the club's header until after impact. Finish Try to stick your landing: weight on your left side, right foot pointed, without shaking. Good shot! RELATED: Try the , and get ready for the biggest golf season of your life. Warming up the right way golf is a sport, not a game. Treat it that way. Few hot hot hackers correctly, unless you call screeching in the parking lot and running to the first tee a warm-up. Instead, show up an hour ahead of time and do this: Start your heart warm with cardio to get your blood pumping, says FedEx Cup champion Billy Horschel says. Wear fitness band stretches to open your shoulders and hips. (Try this amazing 4-minute cardio workout.) Untie these creaky knots guys, make like former world No.1 Luke Donald: use a foam reel on the back, hamstrings and buttocks before hitting balls at the range. Plan your practice at the range, don't just hit with your driver and a couple of favorite clubs. Work your way through your bag, Donald says. Then pretend you're playing: imagine the first few holes and practice those tee shots and approaches. Roll 'Em Easy It's important to practice short putts - you know, the ones that go crazy when you get lost. But you can never practice too many long putts, says 2006 U.S. Open winner Geoff Ogilvy. Feeling that freer stroke will help you in short putts too. Roll It Close Learn the scoring game before each other, as Rory McIlroy did, says his coach, Michael Bannon. So practice chips and put —a lot. If you are a guy who shoots 90, about half of your shots will be chips and putts. You're not Tiger Woods, you're just a guy! Be realistic Take more club than you think you need and try a three-quarter swing. You'll have a better chance of hitting the solid ball, says Billy Horschel. Track your hacks This is geeky but it works. If you keep track of your stats (fairways and greens hit, total putts) you can identify your weaknesses, Bannon says. Then fix the worst in your game first. Note: You can get it done after the round. Don't slow things down with your geek count. RELATED: 10 Crazy Body Connections Run It Up Americans love high pitch shots. But in most public courses – including Chambers Bay – a lower shot and running is the safest, easiest, highest shooting percentage. It's a very simple trait, Bannon says. Act Like You Belong Etiquette scares off many rare golfers. Relax, we're friends out here. But you can put your mind at ease - and reassure your friends - with these little reminders. Know the rules You have to get the ball behind the scoreboards, up to two club lengths. On the greens, slide the marker behind the ball without touching it. Play when you're ready Keep playing on the move, begs Luke Donald. Of course, in a Competition, the player further away from the hole hits first. This isn't serious. If you're ready, hit. Look at your step, don't walk where another guy's putt is going to go. And by removing the ball from the hole, the foot can leave a lump. Tap the area to smooth it. Repair the ball marks If your shooting approach hits the green, savor the moment - and repair that crater. Use a suitable tool to push damaged lawn back; then tamp down. Be nice to the carriage girl Who approaches the drinks cart first offers to buy for everyone – they even out at the end. It is allowed to flirt gently if the tip is generous. Sometimes it pays to be a softy Many of the big name balls like Titleist and Nike are designed for the fast swings of top players. The stroke is likely to be much slower, so a low compression ball, such as callaway Chrome Soft ($38/dozen, callawaygolf.com), makes more sense. It will coax further away from slower swings, and rotate less of the driver's face for straighter tee shots. Around the greens, the soft cover will help you put more spin on chips for better control. Material:glass pyramid, artificial grass, piece of wood, dry branches, thermocol balls. Golf is rooted in Scottish culture. Leisurely sport as we know it today dates back to the 16th century in Scotland, with many of the country's golf clubs and golf courses existing for centuries. The most historic courses include the Old Course of St Andrews and the Old Course of Musselburgh, which have origins in the 1700s, and today many players are on courses that designed and built in the 18th and 19th centuries. However, golf has been played in Scotland in some way since the Middle Ages and the game has often been tied to the country's royalty, Mary Queen of Scots, one of the first women to play golf, played notoriously at St. Andrews just a few weeks ago her husband's funeral. Those travelling to Scotland should consider taking part in a round or two, especially in one of the traditional historic courses, which can be found both in remote areas and within cities. Whether you want to play on the iconic links to St. Andrews or relax along the coast at Royal Dornoch's championship course, Scotland has many picturesque golf courses to choose from. Most famous courses welcome visitors as long as they book Tee Times well in advance, so you can turn your Scottish holiday into a golfing holiday. 01 of 12 David Cannon / Getty Images Castle Stuart Golf Links is a championship course that overlooks Moray Firth. It's a visually stunning field, with incredible views from most holes, and has an Art Deco-style clubhouse offering equally stunning views. The course is open between the end of March and the end of November and the price varies depending on the time of year. A round costs 165 pounds in April and November and 225 pounds from May to October, with discount rates for PGA and BIGGA players. Reservations can be made in advance by phone or email. Castle Stuart Golf Links also offers several properties, which can be booked as a Stay &P Package. Play for specific months. 02 out of 12 Courtesy of St Andrews Links St Andrews Links is probably one of the most iconic golf courses in the world. The links have existed for over 600 years and now has seven public courses, as well as three clubhouses and a golf academy. Players can select which course they would like to book, including the centenary Old Course. Round fees range from £95 during the off-season to £195 during the high season for the Old Course, and are more affordable for the other courses, with prices as low as £8 during the off-season. Be sure to make an online booking to ensure a tee time. 03 of 12 Courtesy of Royal Dornoch Golf Club Royal Dornoch is a links championship dating back to 1616. Located along Dornoch Firth, the golf club has incredible views of the water and two courses: the Championship Course and the Struie Course. The courses are open to the public seven days a week and early booking is highly recommended. The cost per round ranges from 105 pounds from November to March and 195 pounds from April to October for the Championship Course. The Struie Course is more affordable, at £35 per round from November to March and £50 from April to October. Rates tend to change every year, so check online for the most up-to-date rates. 04 of 12 Courtesy of North Berwick Golf Club North Berwick Golf Club is famous for its historic West Links course, which has been played since the 17th century. The countryside overlooks the Firth of Forth, overlooking the town of North Berwick, and members of the public are welcomed at the golf club. Round fares vary depending on the season, starting at £100 and rising to £160 from April to October. Check the visitor's schedule and be sure to book a tee time in advance. Because links are a championship course, it is only recommended for experienced players. North Berwick asks that golfers have a handicap of no more than 14 for men and 36 for women. The course itself is incredibly picturesque, overlooking the green hills and Firth of Forth, and is a short drive from Edinburgh. A round of golf costs £270 during the main season and £110 during the winter, although rates change each year so it is best to check online for current rates. Reservations can be made online for next year. 07 out of 12 Peter Dazeley / Getty Images Address Auchterarder, UK Gleneagles, which has three championship courses and a nine-hole course, is one of the main names on Scotland's golf scene. It has extensive facilities including a hotel and numerous restaurants, and the golf club is home to the PGA National Academy for Scotland. The courses are open to golfers of all abilities throughout the year and can be booked through the hotel or online. Rates vary depending on the time of year, with rates per round going from £75 to £200 on one of the 18-hole courses. The smaller course is a good way to get a taste of Gleneagles on a budget, with rates per round from £20 to £37.50. Don't miss the spa, which is perfect for a visit after finishing golf. 08 out of 12 Courtesy of Carnoustie Golf Links Found off the coast of the North Sea of Scotland, Carnoustie Golf Links is a championship course with a history dating back to the 16th century. The links also feature the Burnside Course and the Buddon Links Course, which opened more recently. Fees start at £180 during the off-season and rise to £252 during high season on the Championship Course, with lower fees available for the other two courses. Search for package deals on the course website to save if you are planning golf for more than a day. Continue to 9 from 12 below. 09 out of 12 Courtesy Kingsbarn Golf Links Kingsbarns Golf Links is a traditional Scottish golf link that lies close to the Fife coast. The course is closed between and mid-March, but visitors can book a tee time for the rest of the year (reservations are recommended well in advance). The round rate ranges from 260 pounds to 312 pounds depending on the time of year. Caddies, which are notoriously good at this course, cost an additional £55. Last minute bookings are hard to come by at Kingsbarns, but visitors can check out the upcoming tee times available online through the course website. 10 out of 12 Courtesy of royal Aberdeen Golf Club Royal Aberdeen Golf Club was founded in 1780 as the Aberdeen Golfers Society and its royal patronage was awarded by Edward VII in 1903. Visitors can join members on year-round links, with prices per round starting at 95 pounds during the winter and rising to 195 pounds between May and October. Tee times for visitors are limited to specific hours on certain days, so be sure to check the golf club website when making a reservation (which is best done by email). Visitors can also attend open tournaments on the course several times a year. 11 of 12 Tony Roberts/CORBIS/Getty Images Enjoy the views of Loch Lomond from Loch Lomond Golf Club, a memorable high-end golf course with its own spa. Unfortunately for the public, Loch Lomond Golf Club is a private member's club, which is notoriously difficult to enter. If you are connected, however, the club has one of the most pristine courses in scotland and is a favourite with players from all over the world. If you are dying to play there, there are charity events occasionally held on the course, where visitors can donate to gain access to links. 12 out of 12 Courtesy of Nairn Golf Course Like the rest of Scotland's best golf courses, Nairn Golf Club is in the water. The countryside, built in 1887, overlooks Moray Firth and its beaches. Although a private members club, Nairn welcomes visitors of all ages and abilities throughout the year. Greens fees go from £90 to £180, depending on the season, and visitors can also deal with the smaller Cameron course for just £20 per day. Don't skip the historic surroundings of the course, located between the 9th and 10th green, which now serves snacks and refreshments; It is a great place to take the views between holes. Holes.
